

Roger Crockett

Roger is a Senior Partner at inQUEST.

Roger is a specialist in business leadership, diversity and inclusion. For nearly three decades, he has researched and written about the leadership strategies, styles, and initiatives of senior corporate executives and influential business leaders. Roger leverages this experience at inQUEST, where he speaks and writes about leadership strategies, diversity in business, and best practice diversity and inclusion initiatives. As a senior partner, Roger shares his expertise with clients to help them develop savvy leadership, diversity acumen, and strategic communications.

Previously, Roger served as the Chicago deputy bureau chief for Businessweek magazine, where he wrote several award-winning articles about powerful companies, executives, and the critical issues they face – from digital transformation to diversity and inclusion. Roger’s trusted insight on business leadership, diversity and inclusion have made him a sought-after facilitator, moderator and TV news analyst.

Roger teaches leadership at the DePaul University Driehaus College of Business. He is Vice Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Saint Xavier University, a member of the Chicago Sinfonietta Board of Directors, and a member of the Board of Governors of the Metropolitan Club of Chicago. In 2015, Roger was chosen to join the ranks of Chicago United’s distinguished Business Leaders of Color. He lives in Chicago with his wife, and travels often to his hometown of San Jose, CA.

Roger is a graduate of UCLA and earned his M.S. in Journalism with honors from Columbia University.

“We live in a world where change is the only constant—success, and in fact survival, depend on an organization’s ability to leverage D&I to react, reinvent, and innovate.”
